City Natatorial Finals at Piedmont Park Today

POOL CHAMPIONS WILL BE CROWNED THIS AFTERNOON

Charleston Champs From Howard Theater Will Demonstrate Steps at Constitution Carnival.

DIVING CONTESTS TO CLOSE PROGRAM

Successful Swimming Meet Closes at Dusk. Hope To Discover Future Record Smasher.

BY DICK HAWKINS.

Today is a day for labor and yet a day of rest, but there will be no rest for the swimmers of Atlanta until sundown finds a corps of new city pool champions crowned in the finals of the Constitution's gigantic aquatic carnival at Piedmont Park this afternoon.

More than four score swimmers entered the elimination contests at Piedmont Park Saturday and the winners of the trial and semi-final heats in the initial races meet today for the championship of the city pools.

A crowd of more than 500 persons witnessed the races on Saturday and with the finals slated for this afternoon as well as other features, probably ten times 500 will jam the banks of Piedmont lake today.

Champion Charlestoners. The swimming contests are enough to draw the crowds but in addition to witnessing the athletic events, the sport lovers who visit the park today will have an opportunity to meet the members of the famous troop of champion Charlestoners of the United States who are playing at the Howard theater this week and who will entertain the spectators with some of their championship steps.

City employees organizations have prepared a float for entry in the Labor Day parade and this float will be brought to the park to be used as a stage for "Atlanta's Own" Trinx Jackson and the other dancing beauties.

The Howard management has promised to have the artists at the park as soon as possible after the afternoon performance and officials of the meet have made arrangements to halt the swimming and diving events for an interval while the theatrical show is being presented. The float has been constructed under the direction of L. L. Wallis, manager of the park, and he declares that the miniature ship will provide ample space for the Charlestoners.

Start at 2 O'Clock. The divers will "do their stuff" to the music of a band which will be placed on the float by the City Park department. The float has been constructed under the direction of L. L. Wallis, manager of the park, and he declares that the miniature ship will provide ample space for the Charlestoners.

Only One Way to Certain

There is some article you desire. It may be a tie or an automobile, a pair of stockings or a gown, a lawnmower or a house.

Read the advertisements in The Constitution and see if just what you desire is offered at a very reasonable price.

Don't get the idea that there is no use reading the advertisements because a few times you have read them you failed to find just what you wanted. A dealer cannot feature every article in his store in every advertisement.

There is only one way to be certain; only one way never to miss real bargain; and that is to read the advertisements in The Constitution every morning.

ADVERTISING IN THE CONSTITUTION SAVES THE ADVERTISER AND SAVES THE BUYER.

Motorcycle Crash Fatal To One Boy; Second Near Death

Harrold Apperson, 17, Killed When Motorcycle Runs Off Embankment Near Bull Sluice.

ACCIDENT CAUSED BY BROKEN CHAIN

Harry Shaw Is Not Expected To Recover From Injuries by Grady Physicians.

Harrold Apperson, 17, of 756 Lillian street, was killed and Harry Shaw, of 765 Bonnie Brae avenue, was probably fatally injured Sunday morning when the motorcycle on which the two youths were riding plunged over an embankment at Bull Sluice lake.

Apperson was operating the motorcycle, according to friends, and it must have been traveling at a rapid rate of speed at the time of the fatal plunge from the highway more than twenty feet down the embankment. A broken, twisted chain, locked in the rear wheel of the motorcycle was evidence enough of what had happened.

The power chain snapped, locked the driving wheel and the motorcycle skidded and pitched over the embankment, carrying the two boys with it and throwing them fully fifty feet away from where the machine came to a rest.

Shaw Near Death. Apperson died of a fractured skull and internal injuries. Shaw, too, suffered a fractured skull and serious internal injuries, which lead physicians at Grady hospital to fear that he will not outlive the day. Apperson died almost instantly.

The two boys, with a friend, Raphael Painter, had gone to Bull Sluice to spend the day. Sunday morning Apperson and Shaw got on the motor to go over to a nearby store. They were to return in a very few minutes. After an hour had gone, with no sight of his companions, Painter got in his automobile and began the drive along the edge of the lake, hoping to find the boys or find them at the store.

Saw Wreck. He had not gone far when he saw the wrecked motorcycle below the road and the forms of his two friends sprawled upon the ground. He summoned aid and the boys were rushed to the hospital.

Doctors worked desperately Sunday night to save Shaw from the same fate of his companion, but little hope was held for his recovery. The skull fracture was pronounced of sufficient seriousness to cause his death, and augmented by internal injuries, his chances for life were declared slim. Funeral arrangements will be announced today by Apperson's parents.

POLITICAL RACERS NEARING FRENZY IN CLOSING DAYS

Only Two Days Left for Campaigning Before Voters Decide at Polls Wednesday.

With only two more days in which to conduct active political campaigns, county, district and state office aspirants today renew with enthusiasm their respective fights which they hope will lead to official positions.

During the early part of the campaign the state primary of next Wednesday gave indications of being a quiet and peaceful series of races, but during the past two weeks interest has increased and the campaigns have developed into contests which are providing plenty of excitement for politicians.

Today available park pavilions, auditoriums, court houses and other places in which speeches of candidates may take place, will be in demand and probably filled to overflowing with constituents of the various candidates.

Last-Minute Appeals. Typewriters will be kept constantly patterning by stenographers who have been on the job in preparing last-minute appeals.

The death of the prominent young Atlanta came as a distinct shock to his many friends in Atlanta and throughout the south. He was apparently in good health up until Saturday night, when he suffered an acute heart attack. He recovered, however, and was not taken again until early Sunday morning, when, arising from his bed, he fell down on the floor. He was at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Prescott, when death came.

Mr. Prescott was a graduate of Marietta college and attended Georgia Tech and Woodbury Forest, in Virginia. ### KING AND PREMIER PLACE COUNTRY ON BASIS OF WAR

Minister of War Calls Officers To Their Posts as Mutiny Breaks Out Among Cadets.

ARTILLERY CORPS REVOLT IS NIPPED

Sudden Development in Long-Simmering Situation Laid to Disaffection and Lack of Discipline.

BY RAFAEL MORAYTA. Madrid, September 5.—Spain awoke today under martial law.

Acting rapidly during the night to quell a threatened revolt by the artillery corps, King Alfonso signed the decree declaring this drastic national military jurisdiction, and Primo de Rivera, premier and dictator of his kingdom, promulgated it forthwith.

All artillery officers have been suspended by the government and two of the highest rank have been arrested. Late tonight the government issued a communique claiming that the crisis had been solved through the submission of the officers arrested.

Government decrees designed to meet the situation are being integrally enforced.

Signing the martial law decree at San Sebastian, the king left there at 2 o'clock this morning and arrived at Madrid at 9. A meeting of the cabinet was held and Alfonso conferred twice with De Rivera.

"Indiscipline" Cited. An official statement explaining the sudden development in the long-simmering situation cites the recent disaffection of the artillery corps, which it says culminated in "acts of real indiscipline."

The commander of the artillery corps, without the knowledge of the minister of war, is alleged yesterday to have ordered all officers immediately to join their regiments.

The commander of the artillery regiment at Segovia ordered his troops concentrated at headquarters "in the event that other troops from Madrid might attack them."

Consequently the government announced, both these artillery chiefs had been placed under arrest.

Decree Is Signed. The decree of martial law, which De Rivera signed before it went to the king, declares: "In accordance with the decision of the council of ministers: 'In the event of a general insurrection throughout Spain and also in the Balearic and Canary islands. 'Secondly, all who oppose or resist'

Trinx Jackson and Pals, ATLANTA GIRL GREETED BY THOUSANDS AT TERMINAL Charleston Champs, Arrive

BY LOY WARWICK.

Several months ago the Howard theater and The Constitution conducted a Charleston contest and Trinx Jackson won by several knees.

Now she is back in Atlanta. She was so happy to get back to Atlanta she could hardly stand it. And her folks and her friends were so happy to see her back that they could hardly stand it either.

Trinx created almost as big a sensation in the Terminal station as Bessie Jones, but she refused to be carried out on anybody's shoulders, despite the tiring trip from Memphis.

With Trinx came nine other distinguished young ladies, who, like the Atlanta champion, were winners in Charleston contests in their own home towns.

The production "Charleston" is the feature attraction at the Howard theater this week. Ask those who saw the one-minute-after-midnight show Sunday night, or rather, Monday morning, if you don't believe it. All of the girls you have just met are sharing equal starring roles in the production, produced by Boris Petroff. It played and met with high favor in practically every Public theater in eastern United States.

The show is good. It has attracted wide attention. Managers have been getting serious about contracts with every one of the Charleston girls ever since the word spread around that there were no mistakes made when the various cities picked their representatives.

TO APOTHEOSIZE SPIRIT OF LABOR IN PARADE TODAY

All privileges of every city park in Atlanta will be free to the general public today, according to an announcement by L. L. Wallace, manager of municipal parks, who declared that the greatest attendance in the history of Atlanta was expected for this observance of Labor day.

Atlanta's tribute to labor and celebration of the one day of the year set aside in honor of the man who works, will be launched at 10 o'clock this morning with the most impressive Labor day parade that has ever passed through the business district of the city, it was assured Sunday when reports on preparations for the day were announced at the final meeting of the general labor day committee of the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

Practically every one of the more than 50 units represented in the federation and nearly a dozen civic organizations besides will assemble at 9:30 o'clock at the corner of Central avenue, Garnett and Pullman streets and will move off to the martial strains from brass bands and drum corps, promptly at 10 o'clock, passing out Whitehall and Peachtree to Baker, turning and re-passing over the same route to Alabama, where they will disband and hike themselves to the parks for an afternoon of frolic and an evening of fun.

The parade this year will launch the day's festivities in the same spirit that was introduced last year when the federation of trades invited participation of outside organizations for the first time. The community chest, the committee of church cooperation, the American legion, the junior chamber of commerce, the senior chamber of commerce, the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association and the Presidents' club are among the organizations co-operating.

City Float. One striking float in the parade

Fifty Are Injured When Crack Denver-Rio Grande Passenger Train Jumps Track.

COACHES ARE PILED INTO BED OF RIVER

Engine Is Thrown Almost Across Stream, Which Is About Seventy-Five Feet Wide.

Salida, Colo., September 5.—(AP)—Nineteen persons were killed and 50 injured, half of them seriously, when the engine and seven cars of the crack "Scenic Special" of the Denver and Rio Grande Western railroad toppled into the Arkansas river in the mountainous country near Leadville today.

The train, running slowly, struck a curve, tore up 150 feet of tracks and dived downward across the river, landing 30 feet from the far side of the stream. The baggage cars, two coaches and a sleeper followed the engine and piled up in 8 feet of water.

Victims Cry for Aid. Many injured passengers, strewn along the banks of the river, were crying for aid when relief trains from here reached the scene of the wreck at 12:45 p. m., two hours after the wreck occurred. Survivors were huddled about fires thawing out after their plunge into the icy waters of the river. First aid was administered to the sufferers and the train brought the more seriously injured to hospitals here.

The wreck occurred in the canyon of the Arkansas river, bordered on the west by the towering Sawatch range, in which are located Mount Massive and Mount Yale, two of Colorado's most towering peaks. The scene of the

CHARLES H. CLARK DIES IN HARTFORD

Editor of Courant Started Work on Paper as Reporter After Graduating at Yale.

Hartford, Conn., September 5.—(AP) Charles Hopkins Clark, editor of The Hartford Courant, died tonight at his home here after an illness of several months following a general breakdown due to advancing years. A cerebral hemorrhage early today was the immediate cause of death. He was in his seventy-ninth year.

As a young man, recently graduated from Yale college, Charles Hopkins Clark, seeking a start in life, applied for work at the office of the Hartford, Conn., Courant and was given temporary employment. This temporary job became permanent and resulted in an uninterrupted service of more than a century, during which Mr. Clark advanced through the various editorial positions to editor in chief and finally to president of the Hartford Courant company and editor of The Courant.

Interest in Politics. Mr. Clark's interest in politics, encouraged during his early training in newspaper work, was continued throughout his life. He began attending the national conventions of the republican party in 1888, when Benjamin Harrison was nominated for the presidency. Thereafter for several years he went as a newspaperman and then regularly as a delegate from Connecticut. He was elected a delegate at-large to the Cleveland convention in 1924.

The Associated Press elected Mr. Clark a director in 1910 and re-elected him for succeeding terms. He also served on the executive committee.

SUSPECT IS HELD PENDING ADVICES OF LOCAL POLICE

Man Seized When Recognized as Fitting Description of Alleged Murderer Wanted Here.

NOT MAN WANTED, PRISONER ASSERTS

Woman Also Arrested, But Later Released; Retains Counsel To Seek Wilson's Freedom.

Jack Wilson, wanted in Atlanta for the murder of William H. Cheek, Peachtree road grocer, is reported to have been arrested in Selma, Ala., Sunday night.

Mell Gore, Buckhead youth, is under sentence to die in the electric chair September 14, for complicity in the same crime. Saturday Governor Walker refused to stay his execution.

Associated Press dispatches from Selma late Sunday night said that a Jack Wilson, believed to be the same Jack Wilson who shot and killed Cheek in a daring holdup of his grocery store, was arrested Sunday night about 10 o'clock and is confined in the county jail at Selma.

Arrested in Store. At the time of his arrest, according to the dispatches, Wilson was with a woman claiming to be his wife. He was taken into custody in a drug store when a deputy sheriff noticed the striking similarity of Wilson to the man wanted here.

Wilson denies that he is the murderer of Cheek or that he is the man wanted in Atlanta. The woman was released. She immediately employed an attorney and returned to the jail in an effort to gain Wilson's freedom. She was denied admission.

Full descriptions of Wilson will be given Atlanta police in an effort to determine positive identification. Dispatches from Selma were to the effect that Sheriff J. E. Gaddy, of Selma, informed Atlanta police of Wilson's arrest over long distance telephone, but authorities here declared that no word had been received from Selma, either by wire or telephone.

Story of Crime. Cheek was shot down during a pre-Christmas robbery in his grocery store on Peachtree road in the presence of his horror-stricken wife and children. Ruby Ray, girl companion of Gore, indicted on a charge of accessory after the fact, was arrested with aiding Jack Wilson to escape, was convicted and sentenced to serve six years in the state penitentiary.

These Barry, Buckhead youth, also was indicted as an accomplice to the murder and was given a life sentence by a jury in Fulton superior court.

Gore was convicted of first degree murder in Fulton courts. He is alleged to have entered the store with Wilson, whom it is charged, fired the shot which ended Cheek's life. Gore

PHYSICIAN DENIES HE POISONED WIFE

Nashville, Tenn., September 5.—(AP) Dr. Paul Moore, proprietor of Sequim hospital, Sequim, Washington, who was arrested here by detectives late yesterday upon request of Washington authorities on a charge of murdering his wife by administering poisoned tablets is expected to return to the far western state immediately to face the charge.

Dr. Moore offered the opinion that the charge was brought against him "evidently as the result of malice and an attempt to rob him financially." He was released on $10,000 bond.

He declared the charge placed against him while he was in Nashville visiting his brother, C. P. Moore, member of the faculty of Hume-Forg High school, was the first intimation he had of any suspicion resting upon him following the death of his wife last July.

Upon being informed that William Kendall, a dairy man of near Sequim, accused him of leaving Sequim in company with Kendall's wife, after the death of his wife, Dr. Moore described Kendall as his enemy and laid suspicion of legal designs on the part of the purported wealthy dairyman.

Dr. Moore related here that he had "kicked Kendall down the steps" when he said Kendall went to his office and charged that his wife "was making too frequent visits" to the doctor's office.

He said that he was treating Mrs. Kendall for cancer and had treated her since the alleged accusation of her husband.

Dr. Moore was inclined to discount his belief in reports of discovery of poison tablets in connection with the death of his wife and alleged statements regarding instructions during her illness made by attending physicians and other attendants at the bedside of his wife.

EXTRADITION PLANNED FOR DR. PAUL MOORE

Port Angeles, Wash., September 5.—(AP)—Prosecutor John M. Wilson announced tonight that extradition papers for the return of Dr. Paul Moore, former Sequim physician, from Tennessee to answer charges of poisoning his wife, would be sought at once.

Dr. Moore was arrested last night in Nashville, at the home of his brother, half an hour after his arrival there. Mrs. Moore died in a Sequim hospital after an operation. Moore was charged with murder when a report was made by a Seattle pathologist that poison had been found in her body which was exhumed last week.

The affidavits were sworn to by physicians and nurses who tended Mrs. Moore during and after her operation.

Prosecutor Wilson indicated Dr. Moore will not be admitted to bail if he is returned here.

DRY AGENTS CAPTURE 33

Seabrook, state constable; George Scarborough, Berkeley county policeman; Eldridge Scarborough, Berkeley county; John Wright, Berkeley county; Clarence Jackson, Berkeley county; W. D. Jackson, Berkeley county; Gilbert Weston, Berkeley county; B. Seabrook, Berkeley county, federal prohibition agent; Boisey Williams, negro, Edisto island; Benjamin Bailey, negro, Edisto island; Sambo Nelson, negro, Edisto island; H. E. Wise, Charleston; D. L. Jervey, Charleston; W. Raze, Charleston; E. S. Wilkinson, Charleston; Henry S. Gamble, sheriff of Williamsburg county; M. F. Hazendon, Berkeley county; G. M. Ham, constable, Berkeley county; T. F. Henchey, Charleston; Hunter Skyles, Charleston; Louis Hamilton, Charleston; Charles Brown, Charleston; and Melvin O'Neal, Charleston.

The raid, carefully planned and with every detail mapped out, army fashion, in advance, was directed from the Yamacraw in the harbor here by M. O. Dunning, coordinator of this section of the south, said the statement, "it has been my effort to go to various sections and at first hand gather detailed information as to true existing conditions and based on this information it has been found necessary for me to set up my own machinery in an effort to apprehend and bring to justice those individuals and groups that have cooperated together in violation of prohibition, internal revenue and customs laws."

"To this end, some time ago, I came in person to city and county of Charleston and made first hand investigations. I found that law violators were so firmly entrenched and surrounded by so many individuals who should have been enforcing the law and who were not in any wise making any effort so to do, that it became necessary for me to employ not only outside assistance but to work from within."

"I found that citizens of certain communities were not to be blamed for existing conditions as much as the officers charged with the execution of crime. The result of the actions of certain state and federal officers was to increase instead of diminish crime. I decided to clean up the situation regardless of where the culprits may fall. To this end I was able to convince G. D. Knight that the best thing for him to do was to get out of the whisky business, he according to my best information, having given up the business a short time previous and before any proceedings were pending against him, and lend his assistance toward the accomplishment of breaking up the liquor ring around Charleston and Berkeley counties. Mr. McKnight was duly commissioned as a federal agent and instructed to work under cover in connection with other agents."

Preparations for the raid have been under way for weeks. Coordinator Dunning made known today "Under cover" men, one of them G. D. McKnight, former "king of the rum runners" in Berkeley and Charleston counties, have been working for some time gathering evidence against officials and to get the greatest possible number of rum runners and bootleggers operating from the "Hell Hole" section, into Berkeley county last night.

Mr. Dunning quietly began gathering his forces at Savannah last Thursday. Thirty federal agents Saturday morning boarded the Coast Guard Cutter Yamacraw. Others started overland for Charleston. Arriving in Charleston harbor late yesterday all of the agents on board the Yamacraw were kept below decks. A telephone was quickly installed aboard the cutter. Then the agents left in groups of two or three, each under a leader who had typewritten instructions as to what his group should do. Warrants had been issued in advance and were placed in the hands of deputy United States marshals.

The raid was so well timed that within an hour after raiders reached their posts, reports of arrests and seizures of liquor and rum running automobiles began coming into headquarters.

Prisoners Are Taken

Prisoners were not taken to county jails but were brought on board the Yamacraw. They were questioned and then placed in the ship's brig or guarded by coast guardsmen. Seized liquor was brought on board the cutter and stored. Confiscated automobiles were pressed into service for the "mopping up" process.

Prohibition Agent Seabrook was arrested at his home by Deputy United States Marshal C. H. Schultz, who was accompanied by McKnight and several other prohibition agents. His house was searched. Officers claimed they found fourteen and one-half gallons of moonshine whisky in the house and $1,155 in bills of which $380 was marked money, alleged to have been given to Seabrook by planted rum runners under Dunning's direction. Seabrook was taken aboard the Yamacraw and placed under guard for the night.

Today, while agents continued the cleanup, the prisoners were taken before United States Commissioner A. M. Hugger for arraignment.

Mr. Dunning revealed today that only officials whose aid was essential to the raid were taken into his confidence regarding the raid. These included: D. E. Meyer, United States district attorney at Charleston; Charles L. Redding, assistant district attorney at Savannah, who also is Mr. Dunning's special legal adviser; Captain P. W. Lauriat, commander of the coast guard cutter Yamacraw; J. H. Lee, prohibition administrator for Georgia; Fred Dunsuke, deputy administrator for Georgia; Louis M. Shimmel, assistant United States attorney at Charleston; Sheriff Ballen, Berkeley county; and others who aided the aid of the department in cleaning up that county, and G. D. McKnight, reformed rum runner and "under cover" man for Dunning.

"Answer to Sharpe." Mr. Dunning characterized the raid as his "answer to Mr. Sharpe," who recently issued a statement criticizing the existing status of prohibition enforcement in his district, asserting that he did not have enough men to cope with the situation. "Here is my answer to Mr. Sharpe," said Mr. Dunning, as he gave out a formal statement.

"As coordinator for this section of the south," said the statement, "it has been my effort to go to various sections and at first hand gather detailed information as to true existing conditions and based on this information it has been found necessary for me to set up my own machinery in an effort to apprehend and bring to justice those individuals and groups that have cooperated together in violation of prohibition, internal revenue and customs laws."

"To this end, some time ago, I came in person to city and county of Charleston and made first hand investigations. I found that law violators were so firmly entrenched and surrounded by so many individuals who should have been enforcing the law and who were not in any wise making any effort so to do, that it became necessary for me to employ not only outside assistance but to work from within."

Received Cooperation

"In furtherance of my plans, after my preliminary investigation, I in person called upon the United States district attorney's office and upon certain of the officials and citizens of the city of Charleston. I desire to say that I received excellent cooperation and valuable assistance from all upon whom I called."

The result of this campaign discloses a situation which, while seemingly shocking, is not out of the ordinary to an individual who is familiar with the operations of the whisky traffic in localities where corrupt officials happen to get into office. I believe that this work done in this section will do much to convince not only the agents who are employed by the government, but all others, that it pays to stay straight. And I further believe that much good has been accomplished by the success that has crowned the efforts of those who have been planning the ways and means toward the bringing about the enforcement of the prohibition law."

CHARLES H. CLARK DIES IN HARTFORD

He was a member of the corporation of Yale university, a director of the Phoenix Fire Insurance company, the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, the Travelers Insurance company, and the Collins company, and treasurer of the Watkinson library and Wadsworth Athenaeum of Hartford. He had been a director of the Connecticut state bank at Cheshire since its establishment.

Born at Hartford, Conn., April 1, 1848, Charles Hopkins Clark had always resided in that city. The son attended grammar school and the Free academy in New York city and upon the return of his family to Hartford completed his education at the high school and Yale, being graduated from the latter in 1871. Two years later he married Miss Ellen Root, daughter of Elisha K. and Maria Root. They had two children, Horace B. Clark and Mary H. Clark, who became the wife of H. K. Welch, of Hartford. Mrs. Clark died in 1905 and four years later Mr. Clark married her sister, Matilda C. Root.

Mr. Clark had traveled extensively. He made two trips to Europe, with Charles Dudley Warner, went through Mexico to the Isthmus of Tehuantepec; visited Cuba and Guatemala with Sir William Van Horn; went through the Culebra cut of the Panama canal before the water was let in and toured Costa Rica. He was a close friend of Chief Justice William Howard Taft and when the latter was secretary of war made with him his longest trip, going to China, Japan and the Philippine islands.

Advancing years failed to lessen the interest in the things to which Mr. Clark had devoted his life. He had kept up his editorial and reading work and continued his frequent fishing trips, which were his principal recreation. On one of these in April, 1924, he suffered a broken shoulder. Shortly before, on the seventy-sixth anniversary of his birth, he arrived on his hour late at his desk. When his tardiness was called to his attention he explained that he started from home on foot, had had to go to the city hall to get his fishing license and then to the polls to vote.

Spain Proclaims Martial Law

The government's orders in connection with the present decree will be considered rebels in the face of the enemy and will be judged by summary jurisdiction.

"Thirdly, all persons will be considered equally implicated who help such opposition or resistances, directly or indirectly, and also all who refuse assistance to the government in dealing with resistance."

The decree dismissing the artillery officers excludes those serving in the "rocco" because their conversion of duty certainly will prevent them from committing the faults which necessitated the decree.

Government Manifesto. A further explanation of the reasons for martial law is contained in a government manifesto to the country issued during the day.

"The government cannot delay any longer to inform the public on this question, which is one of the highest importance, and the solution of which depends entirely from its active and sovereign intervention," the manifesto says.

"The whole question has resulted from the royal decree of June 6, modifying the compensation regulation in the right of public employees to resign, therefore nullifying all resignations presented since 1922."

The manifesto refers to the acts of rebellion which several times "have" resulted in the punishment of the ministers of war and have culminated in the recent rebellion of the artillery officers."

It explains that Saturday night Captain General De Valladoll and the governor of Segovia informed the government of Madrid that a state of rebellion prevailed at the Segovia garrison, the attitude of rebellion being shared even by some of the professors

'King of Rum Runners' Leads Dunning and Men To 'Shiners'

C. D. McKnight Helps Lay Trap

Charleston, S. C., September 5.—(AP)—G. D. McKnight, former "king of the rum runners" in Berkeley and Charleston counties, today was credited with much of the success of the trap laid for liquor law violators and which resulted in 25 persons, including federal, state and county officers, being caught in the net of M. O. Dunning, prohibition coordinator, and his small army of federal agents.

McKnight, never charged in court with breaking the liquor laws, reformed some time ago, it is said. His assistance was solicited by Mr. Dunning.

With his complete knowledge of the personnel of the Berkeley county underworld, McKnight, commissioned as an "under cover" man, was able to know just what was going on. He worked with Munnie Carter, another "under cover" man.

His reformation unknown to his associates, McKnight easily accomplished his purposes. He is alleged to have bought a still from H. S. Scarborough, South Carolina state constable at Pinopolis. Scarborough is said to have captured the still in a raid some time previous.

Then, it is alleged, McKnight went to Alonzo B. Seabrook, federal prohibition agent at Charleston, and sought permission to operate the still. Seabrook is alleged to have demanded $50 a week protection money and urged that the still be placed on some property of the Seabrook family on Edisto island, 50 miles from here. McKnight and Carter were to operate the still and employed a white man and two negroes to begin operations Saturday night.

As Seabrook was being arrested by and instructors at the military academy. In view of this, the government indicated to King Alfonso, says the manifesto, that the convenience of his return to Madrid. He immediately returned, authorizing the declaration of the state of war.

Bewilderment Alleged. Only bewilderment at the general situation could have persuaded the artillery officers to overlook their military duties "and even their love for the country," the manifesto says.

"We are dealing now," it continues, "with an evil engendered by the former government which originated federal conflict. This the country has experienced up to recent years."

The government cannot permit the feeding of the mortal germs of rebellion. The government undoubtedly is supported by the army corps, but it is the responsibility of the government to see that the army corps are not the commanders of the various corps areas in Spain that order reigns throughout the country, with the exception, possibly, of Segovia, where is located the artillery garrison which revolted.

Officers and Officials Are Arrested. Hendaye, France, September 5.—General Haro and other high officials have been arrested by the Spanish army, according to reports from across the border.

Haro came to Madrid last week to present to Premier de Rivera and King Alfonso the protest of the artillery officers against a decree abolishing the seniority system in the Spanish army. Haro was turned down by de Rivera. Artillery officers have contended that the seniority system was a favor to the army and to promote his favorites at will.

The captain general of Madrid was busy through the night, it is reported here, and the army officers were ordered to duty at stations in the capital. Considerable excitement is reported.

'Historic Events' Now Coming True

Hendaye, France, September 5.—(AP)—The "historic events in Spain" predicted by the Senor Yanguas, the foreign minister, prior to his demand for Spanish assistance for Madrid are occurring across the French frontier. Instead of Spain, however, they are confined to internal disorders, which, advisers reaching here indicate, are assuming formidable proportions.

With army mutinies breaking out at Segovia, 45 miles northwest of Madrid, and Valladolid, 100 miles from Madrid, rebellions are reported to be severely strained between the dictator and the king. General Primo de Rivera has a problem of more immediate concern, on his horizon, than the withdrawal from the League of Nations or repudiation of the Algeciras treaty, which Senator Yanguas' statement was interpreted as forecasting.

While stringent measures already have been taken by Primo de Rivera to prevent the revolutionary movement from spreading, he is awaiting the arrival of King Alfonso to obtain the king's consent to a stern repressive program, such as the declaration of a state of siege and the wholesale arrest of army officers and leaders of the movement.

It is not certain, however, that Alfonso will agree to this, as there has been an estrangement for the past few months between him and Primo de Rivera. The king's appointment of General Berenguer, former high commissioner in Morocco, as commander of the royal military household, is said to have been the last straw.

The premier, a few months ago, was equally as saying publicly: "I would rather run a sword through my body than shake hands with Berenguer."

Legal lights assert the case is unique in that it marks the first actual trial of so high a government official as Daugherty on criminal charges arising from acts during his tenure of office. The former attorney general was cited by the federal grand jury here last week on a charge of refusing to answer questions propounded during the district attorney's inquiry, on the ground that it would incriminate him.

GEORGIA POLITICAL "MACHINE" FRANTIC

Holder's Campaign Goes on Rocks

HARDMAN

THE NEXT GOVERNOR

No state in the union has a more miserable, extravagant and wasteful road building program than Georgia. Over 35 million dollars has been spent in cash and we have less than 500 miles of paved roads. Less than six counties connected with hard surfaced roads. The cost of maintenance is more than any southern state.

With gross negligence, extravagance, overlapping and other wasteful methods it is costing the taxpayers of Georgia hundreds of thousands of dollars and still we have no roads. Machinery is being hauled all over the state for small contracts by an army of unnecessary men, employed only for the purpose of holding together the political machine. Never was a time in the history of our state when we needed a business administration free of petty politicians, demagogues and machine-politicians. Everybody knows it. John Holder is behind that machine and under it. There is a deep current of political design in which John Holder is merely a tool.

Georgia is simply warped and dwarfed by a system of insidious politics of destructive character more so than any other state in the country. In the economic life of Georgia the political machine has been destructive. It attempts destructive methods in preventing a constructive business administration of this state. But it cannot be done. The people have a voice and will nominate Dr. L. G. Hardman as the next Governor of this state. Because—

HE IS A SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS MAN AND FARMER.

BECAUSE HIS CHARACTER REMAINS UNSULLIED.

BECAUSE HE ENJOYS THE CONFIDENCE AND ESTEEM OF ALL WHO KNOW HIM.

BECAUSE HE IS EXPERIENCED IN LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

BECAUSE HE STANDS FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS, REVERENCE, TRUTH AND HONESTY.

AND PARAMOUNT OF ALL, BECAUSE GEORGIA NEEDS HIM IN THE GOVERNOR'S CHAIR.

Dr. Hardman is free from political influences and will enter the chief executive's office unhampered with pledges and promises to office seekers. No man should be appointed to any office unless he is qualified to fill it in a most capable manner. This will be the rule on which appointments will be made under the Hardman administration.

Dr. Hardman is entitled to the nomination at this time in view of the fact that in his previous race he only needed seven electoral votes at the Macon convention to receive the democratic nomination.

His loyal friends throughout the state have rallied to his standard for they realize now is the time to place Georgia in the forefront of southern states and have as her Governor a man who stands for and will give Georgia a business administration.

There are no issues in this campaign other than the election of a politician who is unfitted for office or a man who has every qualification for Governor—that man is Dr. L. G. Hardman. Vote for him next Wednesday for "HE IS THE BEST MAN IN THE RACE."

Holder Convict Lease Talk 'Political Rabbit,' Says Carswell Manager

Uncovers History of Ancient Fight But Says Holder Is Dodging Today's Issues.

Sam A. Nunn, campaign manager at George H. Carswell's headquarters for the gubernatorial race Sunday issued a new statement from offices in the Kimball House.

Text of the statement reads as follows:

"To divert attention from the real issue of whether the people shall rule Georgia and overthrow the present notorious political machine that dominates us, and to divert attention from the embarrassing predicament into which the machine candidate for governor, John N. Holder, has been entangled by court procedure enjoining his coastal highway 'deferred payments' at the very moment in which his campaign is committed to win or lose on a 'pay-as-you-go' pretense.

"To divert attention from these major issues, Mr. Holder returns to the claim that he ended Georgia's nefarious convict lease system while a member of the general assembly 15 years ago.

"Another campaign rabbit! He hopes it will lead us off into the briars and lose us there.

"We shall follow it just far enough to prove it is a rabbit and to prove our oft-repeated statement that Mr. Holder, then chairman of the house penitentiary committee and hand in glove with the convict lessees and their formidable machine of that time, not only did not seek to end the convict lease system but under guise of ending it sought to perpetuate it.

"And having proved these things we shall let the rabbit go and come back to the main issues.

Press Reports Surveyed.
"Follow us through a brief survey of the newspapers of that year, 1908, when the general assembly faced the alternative of leasing Georgia's convicts for another five years or making other disposition of them.

"Atlanta Journal, July 13, 1908: 'The battle is on to kill the convict lease system.'"

"Chairman Holder says that the substitute offered by himself, for the original bill introduced by his penitentiary committee provides for the working of all felony convicts on the public roads.

"Senator Felder (Thomas S. Felder, of Macon), has read it and says that it perpetuates the lease system under guise of reforming it.

"Senator Felder's resolution providing a legislative investigating commission received the concurrence of the house, July 17, 1908. It called for five members from the house, three from the senate, total eight.

"Mr. Holder, being chairman of the penitentiary committee of the house, logically would have been expected to become a member of the investigating commission. Senator Brock, chairman of the corresponding committee in the senate, named the members of the committee with Senators Felder and Hayes.

"Mr. Holder was not appointed to the commission by Speaker Stanton of the house.

"Atlanta Journal, July 20, 1908: 'Referring to the Holder bill, Mr. Wright said it had come out during the discussion that it was the purpose of the bill to lease out only the negro convicts while the white ones would be worked on the roads or the prison farm. Mr. Wright (Seaborn Wright, representative from Floyd), said that his committee believed the Holder bill was that it continued the system. It was only a plea for a little more time, a little more delay.

"The bill does not kill the system," he declared. "It puts it up to somebody else, to another legislature. It is a plea for time, for delay."

"Atlanta Journal, July 21, 1908: 'Mr. Payton, of Worth, created something of a stir when he said the bill had been prepared by a sub-committee and had been adopted by the penitentiary committee after very immature consideration. Mr. Holder, chairman, took marked exception to what he thought was a reflection of some sort.

"That was the first break in Mr. Holder's armor; the first time the whippers of his disguise slipped a little. He 'im' on the floor of the house anything that happened in committee."

"That same day, July 21, 1908, the investigating commission began work. Senator Felder was elected chairman. Murphy Candler, of DeKalb, was applying the whitewash in the wrong place."

"Atlanta Georgian, September 2, 1908: Another front page cartoon and editorial. Mr. Holder was caricatured with Senator John Knight, of Berrien. The caption was 'The Two Johns.'

"Note the similarity between Mr. Holder's position at that moment and his present position 18 years after. Mr. Holder was flayed with language by J. J. Brown, commissioner of agriculture—another 'John'."

Handled in Leased Bill.
"Atlanta Georgian, September 3, 1908: Another front page editorial and cartoon. Mr. Holder was pictured as standing on the shoulders of a huge pyramid formed by convict lessees and prison commission figures, passing in through a window of the capitol his convict lease bill to Senator Knight."

"So the story went, day after day, with increasing heat and growing fire. Mr. Holder was flayed with language and picture as the man who was pretending to do one thing while he attempted another thing. The extra session was on. Public sentiment would not be satisfied now with compromise. The extra session ended in the enactment of a measure ending the convict lease system the following spring and putting the convicts on the roads.

"And that was what Mr. Holder had tried to keep from doing. He was not to be satisfied now with compromise. The extra session ended in the enactment of a measure ending the convict lease system the following spring and putting the convicts on the roads.

"Why does he explain the multitude of other things that have been charged against him?"

"How does he explain to his all-star cast of campaign managers the most serious of all offenses within his circle of machine politics; the incredible offense of climbing out on a limb and then sawing the limb off? How does he explain to them his political stupidity in allowing them to risk the whole fortunes of his campaign on their slogan of 'Pay as you go' while at the same moment he was undermining all their plans by advertising for 'deferred payment' construction bids on the Coastal highway?"

"How does he explain eating and sleeping at the state's expense in Atlanta, his official headquarters?"

"How does he explain all those checks he drew on highway funds at different times when the legislature was in session?"

"How does he explain spending state money to send himself and his staff on the highway department up and down the roads of Georgia campaigning for Holder for governor and Brown for commissioner of agriculture?"

"How does he explain wasting millions of state money to get 500 miles of paved road?"

Midnight Bill Brought Out.
"How does he explain the Midnight Bill that no member of the legislature could see until it was announced the day after adjournment as having been passed the night before?"

"How does he explain his effrontery in wasting public money as well as private money with his absurd 'hearings' all over Georgia about mythical state aid road mileage that he hasn't got and never has had?"

"How does he explain his entanglement with the commissioner of agriculture, his alignment of the state highway machine with the equally discredited agricultural machine?"

"How does he answer the charge that he has been bringing Georgia convicts to vote for him by giving them a mule and a truck and a project—the mule that won't work and the truck that breaks down and the project that nobody knows the meaning of?"

"How does he explain his requirement upon county after county, in direct violation of the law, that they chip in with their own funds to help the highway department pay for state roads through their borders?"

"How does he explain more than $15,000,000 county bonds that some 35 counties have had to issue on this account—bonds that the state of Georgia will have to redeem some day?"

"How does he explain his supreme statement that the state supreme court 'vindicated' him of the charge on which he was fired from the highway board? What vindication was there about a decision that did not consider the merit of the case, but entered into them at all; a decision that decided just the one point that no matter what Chairman John Holder might do the governor could not fire him? How does he explain that?"

"How does he explain his delay about the padded payroll at East Point? How does he explain his drawing advances upon his salary, in violation of the state law? How does he explain the charges that have been lodged against him?"

"Let the rabbits go!"

"Deal with the issues, Mr. Holder."

WOOD WILL ADDRESS MACON VOTERS TODAY

J. O. Wood, candidate for governor, left Atlanta Sunday night for Macon, where he will speak in the interest of his race Monday under auspices of the Macon Federation of Trades.

Mr. Wood returned Sunday morning from Columbus, where he spoke to Muscogee county citizens Saturday. He stated that in the beginning of his campaign he had "drawn a ring" around Columbus as being a county in which he had thought his efforts would be fruitless, and had decided not to enter it, but there has been a decided change of sentiment in his behalf. He predicted that he will carry Muscogee county.

MACHINE POLITICS IS ISSUE IN RACE, STATES J. O. WOOD

Columbus, Ga., September 5.—(Special)—J. O. Wood, candidate for governor, Saturday night in advocacy of his candidacy for governor, declared that machine politics and not bonds is the main issue of the campaign.

He said he opposed the bond issue because he found the lobbyists who sought bonds did not represent farmers and working men and business men generally, but were spokesmen for northern men and construction men who offered the opening gateway to the North Carolina and who wanted to "get their smooths in the public trough of Georgia."

He said he opposed the bond issue on the further ground that the plan submitted was illegal, in that its advocates to proposed to borrow $70,000,000, pay back $120,000,000 in principal interest and broker age, without a penny of additional cost to the taxpayers, whereas the only method to raise funds was through taxation.

He maintained that the governor has nothing to do with a bond issue inasmuch as that is a function of the legislature, but stated his opposition to bonds so no one could accuse him of dodging an issue.

He attacked Dr. L. G. Hardman's attitude toward labor.

Replying to an editorial in a local paper that said he was not worthy of the voters' consideration, because of his "membership in a masked band," Wood advised the editor to ascertain if the candidate he is supporting is a klansman. Wood said he was open in admitting his klan membership while some of the candidates are blowing both hot and cold on the subject."

LABOR WILL HOLD CELEBRATION TODAY

will be "The City of Atlanta," a big ship carrying 30 passengers, worked out in white and blue flowers and gold plate, which will head the division for city and county employees.

The float was prepared by Virgil Shepard through the efforts of L. L. Wallis, general manager of parks, will carry the municipal band and a quartet of beauties picked from among feminine employees of the city.

More merchants have arranged to close their places of business either all day or during the afternoon this year than ever before, through cooperation of the Atlanta Retail Merchants association with the Labor day committee. Special appreciation of this cooperation was voted by the committee at its final meeting Sunday.

A more varied program of entertainment has been arranged for both afternoon and evening than for any previous Labor day celebration in Atlanta.

Official Celebration.
The Federation of Trades has picked Lakewood amusement park as the place for the official celebration of the day and has arranged a series of events, opening with a basket picnic at 1 o'clock, to continue through the afternoon and evening until 11 o'clock at night.

The Constitution, with the cooperation of the park department, is to sponsor the finals of the city-wide swimming tournament at Lakewood park during the afternoon, with the Charleston champions of 10 American races appearing as an added attraction.

The Lakewood program will begin formally at 2 o'clock with a band concert, during which a program of races, contests, tug of war and other diversions will be held, with several hundred dollars posted as prizes, and climaxed by a mile race, to be won by the fastest of the city.

All past presidents of the federation of trades are eligible for the first heat of the mile race, and a half dozen of the fastest hybrids in the city construction department have been selected to draw the sulks for the event.

The winner will race for the Oscar Mills cup against J. Sid Tiller, president of the federation and chairman of the general Labor day committee.

Horse Race Feature.
A real horse race, with Billy Lee, of Atlanta; W. F. Jenkins, of Okeoka, Ala.; and Dr. L. L. Peacock, of Athens, Ga., driving, will be the feature sports event of the afternoon.

The first heat of the horse race will precede the mile-race preliminaries. The second heat will be run while the mile-race winner is resting for his first dash against President Tiller, and the final heat will conclude the sports program about 4:30 o'clock.

The A. B. McMullen fliers, with their widely publicized plan to fill 100 applications to fill the new left vacant by the death of Jimmy Cat-horn three weeks ago, will swoop over Lakewood park at 5 o'clock for a spectacular exhibition of airplane maneuvers and a parachute leap into the waters of the lake.

"Kiss the girl," is the slogan of the local sport fans through frequent appearances in preliminary and semi-final bouts at boxing shows during the last two weeks, is to make the parachute leap. An inexperienced man when the preliminary tryouts were held at Lakewood last week, Pride has made an average of two parachute leaps a day at Lakewood and Candler fields during the last week, and, according to Captain A. B. McMullen, the airplane pilot, was one of the most expert stunt men who has ever played tag on the edges of the clouds.

Fireworks Display.
The afternoon's program will be followed by a short intermission for supper after which a spectacular fireworks display will be set off beginning at 8 o'clock, with more than 60 different spectacles, featured by a naval battle between an American destroyer and a submarine, worked out in flames on the waters of the lake, and the gorgeous "American Beauty" in which a rose is changed into the free of a eagle.

A free dance will be held in the automobile building, beginning at 8 o'clock, with the Bohemians orchestra playing, and accommodations for more than 5,000 couples to dance at once.

The second showing of "The Pony Express," motion picture story of American conquest of the great west, will begin in the auditorium immediately following the fireworks, and the performance beginning at 6:45 o'clock.

All amusements of the park are to be open to children under 16, at five cents each from 1 to 6 o'clock. Labor day this week taking the place of the usual Wednesday afternoon children's matinee at Lakewood.

Begin Sunday.
Atlanta's observance of Labor day was launched formally Sunday afternoon with a union religious service at the city auditorium, sponsored jointly by the Atlanta Christian council and the Atlanta Federation of Trades.

Plato T. Durham, of Emory university, preached a special sermon on "Labor." Dr. W. H. Faust, of the Gordon Street Baptist church, offered the opening prayer, and Dr. C. P. McLaughlin, of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, closed the service with prayer.

The choir of the Lutheran church, under the direction of Dr. Faust, sang "The Song of the Lark."

special Sunday night when it rolled into the Terminal station. By the time Trinx and her playmates got upstairs, the thing was unanimous: everybody in the station gathered around to watch the girls pose for the pictures and gasp in admiration at the nice way things are fixed up at the entrance gates.

After five or six exchanges of greetings between all parties concerned, Trinx and the rest made off for the Howard to get set for their premiere here.

Entertainments Planned.
In conclusion, it would not be entirely out of order to say that Trinx is a radiant beautiful girl. We are young, we admit, and full of sun and judgment. But if Trinx Jackson isn't a radiant beautiful and one of the most lovely representatives Atlanta the Howard theater and The Constitution ever had, then you can write our name down as the one who tells a lie without slightest equivocation.

In proof of Atlanta's appreciation of the way Trinx has played ball since she left town, a program of entertainment has been arranged which will keep the girl and her friends busy for at least six days. Monday afternoon they will visit Piedmont park to witness The Constitution swimming tournament. Tuesday they will have a look-in at the new Sears, Roebuck plant. Thursday they will lunch with the Citizen club members. There are half a dozen other affairs planned, especially for them, which will be announced as the week gets along towards Saturday.

competition is sure to mark the diving contests in every class. All will come from the 10-foot board on one of the diving towers in the center of the lake and will be in plain view of all who witness the swimming events along the shore.

Seeking Stars.
The swimming meet at Piedmont park today has a greater significance than the mere choosing of a city pool champion in each of the four classes. The Constitution has sponsored the mammoth aquatic carnival with the aid of the park department of city council and members of the Atlanta Athletic club with a view to "finding" swimmers and divers who may have the latent ability of a Wiesmuller or an Ederle.

Many of the world's greatest swimming stars have been discovered splashing about in the municipal pools of American cities and have been given an opportunity to develop their talents after attracting notice by winning just such contests as the one now in progress at Piedmont park.

The thousands who witness the swimming and diving meet at Piedmont today may see the future champion of the world in action.

Following each event the trophy ribbons will be presented to winners and runners-up in all the races and the divers. These will be given to contestants upon application at the clerk's table on the course.

Other prizes to be presented to winners in the various events are listed in the sports section.

Holder 'Machine' Broken, Says Hardman Manager

In an interview given out Sunday night by A. S. Chamlee, campaign manager for Dr. L. G. Hardman, it is stated that the opposition "in despotism" realizing that the Brown-Holder machine has been defeated, and would be "snowed in" next Wednesday by the voters in this state, Dr. Chamlee said:

"Dr. L. G. Hardman will be Georgia's next governor because Holder's campaign is on the rocks. The 'machine' is the most damnable curse ever fastened upon the people of this state, knows it. It is desperate—frantic. It is resorting to every subterfuge, every falsehood, every deception, known to the cunning of the ring of political schemers and cabalists to stem the tide."

"It cannot be done. Money, promises, pats, whisperings, deals, trades, road mileage-hoarding—none of the kind, insidious weapons resorted to by political manipulators and conspirators can stop the sovereign people of Georgia from wiping the slate clean, and from destroying once and for all on next Wednesday the force of political piracy ever known in any other state."

All Counties in District Are Claimed for Upshaw

Declaring that Congressman W. D. Upshaw has more "distinct groups" than both his opponents put together, T. E. Whitaker, manager of the Upshaw campaign committee, issued a statement Saturday in which he said that "the congressman was running true to form and would duplicate his old and repeated record of carrying every county in the district."

"The clashing statements of the Sims-Steele combination against Upshaw," said Mr. Whitaker, "carry their own refutation. They make their boastful claims concerning the same counties and the public can judge as to the reliability of both statements. I propose a sweeping victory for the present congressman at the polls next Wednesday."

Mr. Whitaker's full statement follows: "The clashing statement of the Sims-Steele combination against Upshaw carry their own refutation. They make their boastful claims concerning the same counties and the public can judge as to the reliability of both statements."

"All Counties for Upshaw." "After carefully examining all the evidence in our headquarters—evidence gathered from impartial reports in every county, I believe that Congressman Upshaw is running true to form and will duplicate his old and repeated record of carrying every county in the district."

"Here are the facts concerning Fulton county: 'He has more distinct groups than both his opponents put together.'"

VALENTINO'S OWN LIFE STORY

The superb lines of an athlete and a physical culture devotee are evident in these exclusive poses of the movie idol who has passed on. The square shoulders, flat stomach, rippling muscles of the back, pronounced abdominal oblique, compact thighs, rounded calves and symmetrical lines of the entire figure tell of unusual physical fitness, while the full triceps, outstanding biceps and heavy forearms are those of the trained gymnast. It can never be said that Rudolph Valentino died as a result of neglect of his body.

Rudolph Valentino—known to his intimates as "Vally"—bears his heart in this stirring installment of his romantic life, written by himself.

Cast adrift from the only job at his disposal, he was soon in poverty's grasp.

Rather than compromise his honor he stilled his pride. As he poignantly writes, "beggars can't be choosers."

Against bitter heart repulsion, he became a professional dancer at Maxim's.

New York and was unkind to him—he longed to get away. California beckoned—but read "The Great Lover's" story yourself. It teems with interest.

MIDDLE WEST FLOODS CAUSE HEAVY LOSS
Chicago, September 5.—(P)—A water logged middle west vainly scanned lowering skies tonight for sign of relief from the rain that has flooded fields, depopulated many cities and jeopardized travel. From Ohio to the Dakotas, the general forecast for Monday was of cloudy weather with probable rains.

The torrential downpours and accompanying violent wind squalls at the western edge of the area appeared to have reached their crest Friday night.

Estimated losses to agriculture reached 20 per cent, in some localities in Iowa and Illinois, which shared the worst of the rains.

Grain growers in the area reported that corn would suffer most. Grain authorities said that the crop throughout the central part of the belt already was two weeks behind and required ideal weather to beat the frost.

Sunday morning found hundreds of automobile tourists virtually marooned outside Fulton, Missouri, on United States Highway No. 40, principal thoroughfare between St. Louis and Kansas City. Some sought refuge in nearby farmhouses while others looked to their cars for night's shelter.

THEOSOPHISTS END CHICAGO CONVENTION

Chicago, September 5.—(P)—The party of theosophists who came from abroad to attend the fortieth annual convention of the American Theosophists' association has ended.

Mrs. Annie Besant, international president of the order, departed for Minneapolis to undertake a nationwide lecture tour. Her protégé, Jiddu Krishnamurti, treasurer of the order, is expected to leave for India for the next ten days to complete a book begun in Holland on his way to America.

Krishnamurti has postponed a California trip, fearing that he would be besieged by those interested in his teachings, that he would have no opportunity to complete his writings, which will deal with "true happiness" as embodied in his beliefs. Later he will spend several weeks at Ojai, Calif., with friends, rejoining Mrs. Besant and going through the south and east with her on the latter half of her lecture tour.

The party will be supported by the largest enrollment in the history of the school, it is said.

Plans are on for the erection of a $100,000 school building, the consolidated school district having already voted bonds for the enlargement of the school program.

Ralph Newton is superintendent of the Peach county schools, with J. F. Lambert superintendent of the schools of Fort Valley.

The faculty of 27 teachers is ready for the opening of the doors on Monday with an enrollment of 1,000 pupils.

and settled what debts I could, aided by my kind mother.

Needless to say, I had become more or less stigmatized among my former associates as the "black sheep" of the family. I do not think I was bad, but that restless spirit which clung to me with the tenacity of Sisyphus's stone.

I was like a nervous horse, chafing at the bit, impatient to be doing something different all the time and not content with the life of a professional dancer at Maxim's.

And now, from across the Atlantic, the new world that so long ago my fellow countryman discovered was calling.

America! My mother was against the idea, but it happened that I had a cousin, a cavalry officer, who had rather taken me under his wing—and he was no easy taskmaster. And this cousin said:

"Either he will betray some of the characteristics of his family and become a gentleman and a credit to us all—or else he will end up as a pauper and a beggar."

"Cold-blooded, you say! Yes, but that was what I needed. His was the iron hand, and this time I welcomed it."

As a lover might welcome the warm clasp of his beloved—later I was to find that he knew whereof he spoke.

I never did a dishonest act, nor did I land in jail—but I have known dire poverty and the misery of utter friendlessness in a strange land.

When I reached New York I found myself in a dilemma. My ignorance of English was a great handicap, and the prospects of securing a position at all worthy of what I believed to be my talents seemed very remote.

I drifted into the cafe life—met some Italian and French youths, and also a couple of young Austrians.

Through them I became acquainted with several American girls, and in this way picked up a smattering of the language. I read a little in English and in various ways strove to enrich my vocabulary. Meanwhile my money was going.

Then one day a job loomed. A wealthy man was fixing up an estate in Long Island. He wanted a portion of the grounds landscaped and I got the job.

But, alas, just as everything was in readiness to begin, his wife returned from abroad, decided she wanted to make a small course where the gardens were to be laid out, and I was cast adrift!

The only job I ever had at my profession, I was in dire distress. My money was gone.

Frank Hooper, the son of $24,000, which was the amount due them by your department under the contract you had made, and which your reputation? This resolution failed of passage, due to the fact that the state had no money to pay this bill with.

"Will you also tell the voters, Mr. Brown, why, in 1925, you refused to take $10,000 of your own money to pay the bill?"

"What right have you, Mr. Brown, to take $10,000 of your own money to pay the bill?"

"Let us have an answer to these questions, for the voters have a right to know about them."

However, you failed to mention anything about it in the little pamphlet that you sent out, which you claimed is a record of your department for 1925. We suppose this is an oversight on your part. So, let the voters have an answer before September 8, when they have a right to know all about it. For, remember, regardless of your assumption of power, you are still the servant, and not the master of the people.

"In conclusion, let me call your attention to a passage contained in the Book Everlasting. 'Be sure your sins will find you out.'" lihood." The board's records indicate that about 75 per cent make only one roundtrip voyage.

Only about 13 per cent have shown a sufficient desire to follow the sea for a livelihood to take steps to qualify for the grade of ordinary seamen.

"The rules of the board permit the placing of two 'deck boys' on each large ship. On the Leviathan there are six and on other passenger ships four."

Before accepting an appointment as a "deck boy" is told to read "carefully" the "rules."

"These positions will be restricted to young men of good moral character who desire to stick and make good."

"In this position you will be required to do regular sailor's work on deck. You will be housed the same as the balance of the crew. Your quarters will be comfortable and the food plentiful and good."

"You will be called upon on some occasions to put in long hours at sea depending upon the necessities of the ship and condition of the weather. You will be given fair treatment by the officers and crew and every opportunity to learn seamanship. Shore leave will be granted in home and foreign ports at regular intervals, depending upon the requirements of the vessel."

gone, my clothes going fast, living in a garret, with only a few friends left—most of them having departed when my dollars did. I was in a precarious position.

Stumbles Into Maxim's.
I wonder if you know what real loneliness is? I do. Heavens knows what might have happened had I not luckily wandered into Maxim's one night.

The orchestra leader was a friend of mine—one of the few—and I called to see him in hope of some suggestion that might help me out. He said to me:

"Why not become a dancer here?" "What do you mean?" I asked.

"Well, there are always women who wish to dance, but have no partners. There are many who would like to take lessons. Now, possibly, you could work into something like that."

You have a good appearance—when you're eating regularly. You look well in evening clothes. I know you're a fine dancer. Why not? True, it was an honest occupation, but, like my family, I had always regarded dancing in this way as hardly a man's job.

But beggars can hardly be choosers, and, besides, things were at a pass where I could no longer hesitate without compromising with my honor—a thing I could never do.

I thought of New York's winter snows, and contrasted the dismal vista with that of my own sunny land; I looked mentally into that garret chamber and thought of the comfortable room in my home at Tarento. I envisioned the strange faces in the throng that passed me by and I decided to sink my pride.

After some little while at Maxim's, I was introduced to Bonnie Glass, a wealthy partner for her vaudeville dancing specialty. She took me, and we opened at Rector's.

Immediate Success.
We were an immediate success! Apparently my luck had turned.

Later came an engagement with Joan Sawyer, and by this time I was tired of New York. It had held out many unpleasant days for me to be able to regard it with affection—as yet, anyway.

I still disliked dancing—this kind of dancing. The classic, of course, is different. Also I wanted to try my hand at agriculture, in which I held my degree.

California beckoned—the Golden West! California, I had been told, was something like my own country.

MUSICIAN STRIKE COMES TO CLOSE

Chicago, September 5.—The three-day strike of several thousand theater musicians has been averted.

The temperamental fiddlers and saxophone artists have agreed to go back to work in Chicago for a wage increase of $4.50 per week, instead of the $5 which they had demanded and have decided to drop the controversy over hours and working conditions.

Simultaneously the impending strike of musicians, stage hands and motion picture machine operators in the Orpheum circuit, with theaters in all western cities, was called off on the basis of a similar agreement involving the settlement of the dispute which had caused a walkout in San Francisco.

The situation on the west coast will not be back to normal before Monday, because the strike there already has become effective, but a dispute has been settled definitely according to union and Orpheum circuit headquarters here.

Committees representing opposing factions wrangled through most of the night and reached their agreement in the early hours of Sunday. Word was telegraphed to all local chapters of the union that the strike had been called off and that groups planning to walk out in sympathy with the musicians should be notified.

MAN RUNS AMUCK, THEN KILLS SELF

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution.)
Chicago, Ill., September 5.—Fred Bruemstedt, aged 60, supposed to be mentally affected, ran amuck today in Edinburg, killed Mrs. M. Kanter, aged 61, manager for the Montauk Metallic Bed Company, Inc., of Brooklyn, then barricaded himself in his home after terrorizing and driving out several women relatives.

When the police cordon became too tight, he shot and killed himself.

Bruemstedt's mother, 98 years of age and helpless, unable to move, was a witness to both killings. Officers found her alone and hysterical when they broke down the barricaded door.

Kanter, who lives in Chicago, had motored to Edinburg, Saturday, accompanied by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Kanter, and Mrs. Ruth Nesbit, of Oak Park. They had planned to bring back Mrs. Minnie Simpson, aged 68, mother of Mrs. Kanter.

Mrs. Simpson had become alarmed over the actions of Bruemstedt, who had shown signs of mental decay. About a year ago, he shot a resident of Edinburg without any cause, but was not prosecuted.

Mrs. Kanter and the other women stayed in the Bruemstedt home overnight, but Kanter remained in a hotel, because of lack of sleeping accommodations at the Bruemstedt home.

This morning, when he approached the house, Bruemstedt threw open an upper window, berated him savagely and killed him instantly with a shotgun. The women with the exception of the aged and helpless Mrs. Nesbit, from the house, Mrs. Nesbit with her four-year-old son, leaping from an upper window.

As the officers surrounded the house they heard a shot. Bruemstedt, lying on a bed, had placed the muzzle of the gun against his head and pulled the trigger with his toe.

The Misty Pathway

By FLORENCE RIDDELL

INSTALLMENT XXXVII.

Anders handed the heaving bundle to the grinning native who bore it away for the battle that was to come before he should succeed in fastening a cord round its middle and persuading it to withdraw its hand from the bottle.

"And what will you call him?" asked Anders as the grinning pet, now free of his blanket, returned to his sight.

"It's quite correct to name the hospital cot after its donor," cried Holdingworth hilariously. "Why not the monkey after its presenter? Call it Reginald, Mrs. Fairways!"

"What an insult!" she cried.

"I should take it as a compliment," said Anders softly, "if Mrs. Fairways should give my name to anything she possessed."

"Reginald, new friend, I find you very charming," said Richenda to the monkey.

And Fairways suddenly discovered a new Richenda who could, if the spirit moved her, indulge in subtle flirtation.

Obviously, in the week that came after, the spirit did move her towards this form of recreation. Anders, who had never been known to need encouragement from a pretty woman, received quite an amount of it from Richenda.

Even in the privacy of her own mind, she would not face a definite reason why she should behave in this manner. Was it that she wanted to incense Brett Fairways, to shake him out of this silent brooding which had grown closer than ever upon him lately? Was it that she wanted to show him how little he counted in her scheme of things nowadays? Or was it just a new game played to ease the monotony of camp life in the wilds? She simply didn't know. She only knew that, in some odd way, it pleased her to see Fairways silently watching her while she teased young Anders with laughing lips and eyes that caught and held his own.

And Anders, hot heated with the impulse of sheer youth, paid frequent visits to the camp that held Richenda. "A book that Mrs. Fairways wanted to read," or "A butterfly—rather a rare one—that he thought she'd like to see," or "Some new papers from home," many were the excuses he made for his appearances and Richenda kept him a little longer by her side on each occasion.

But Fairways always lost but few minutes in making a third to their conversation.

Nevertheless, in the blue eyes of Anders, Richenda gradually realized there lay the knowledge that she was not happy. This very realization drew her closer to the fair-headed young Englishman.

To shut up the thoughts inside her as she had to do, allowing them no expression, was hard for the girl. Times were, she longed for the understanding sympathy of the spoken word.

It was towards the end of the second week of the new friendship that chance set Richenda free of surveillance for a short time. Fairways arose one morning with curiously trembling hands and icy chills running down his spine.

"That damn fever again," he told her angrily as a cup suddenly clattered from his shaking fingers to spread a brown stain over the white cloth of the breakfast table.

She eyed him placidly, noted the yellowish gray shade of his face. She knew that the malaria, from which he had suffered years before in Africa, sometimes still took him in its grip, and that this attack would mean a day in the seclusion of his tent, then, with a spin to break the fever and quinine to prevent immediate recurrence, he would probably be quite recovered by the following day—a little weak, perhaps, that would be all. Before their wedding he had been laid low by the same indisposition. Richenda suddenly felt a wicked sense of gladness that there still existed something which could master this man even though it were only these slight returns of malaria.

"You'd better go to bed," she said coolly, and helped herself to a piece of Jerome's nicely browned toast, ornamenting it with a carpet of marmalade. Fairways called peevishly for another cup.

Theague seized him again a few minutes later, shaking him till his teeth rattled like castanets. He rose with an angry imprecation and walked unsteadily across the grass to his own tent.

Richenda finished her breakfast leisurely. Yes—he was ill. But not very ill. At any rate, he didn't deserve that she should run after him like an anxious hen.

An hour later she relented a little. When she approached his own domain she saw through the open door of the tent that Fairways was lying, still fully dressed, upon his camp bedstead. Theague had ceased now, the grayish yellow color was replaced by the crimson flush of fever. The eyes he turned upon her were very bright.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" she asked with a cool politeness which held neither anxiety nor enthusiasm. Obviously a duty question this.

The man read it as such, and answered hoarsely: "Jerome will do all that is necessary. I shall be all right in an hour or so, run away and play, but take care that you don't get into mischief!"

The cynical note in his voice sent her chin high in the air. She turned and left him without another word.

A little smile kinked her lips as she walked across the grass. Of course, one should not feel glad that he was "laid low" like that. And yet, it was nice to know that for once she could do a little bit as she liked without his watching eyes upon her. . . . even though she knew also that her freedom would be short. Malaria attacks were always short, and there was no reason to believe that the one of today would be any more serious than others she had known him to have. She'd make the best of her unexpected freedom.

"Run away and play—but don't get into mischief. . . ." Out of sheer pique she suddenly wanted to get into mischief. Quite innocent mischief, of course, just something that would break the monotony of her days.

It was at that moment that she saw the tall, slim figure of young Anders moving leisurely up the hill towards the camp. With the smile of a naughty child, Richenda hurried to meet him. They came together some distance from the encampment.

"Why, Mrs. Fairways," the boy began with an appreciative glance at the morning freshness of her pretty smiling face.

"Or, Mr. Anders," she broke in, "I was so glad to see you coming. I was all alone, and bored to tears. Brett's got a sore head and chased me out of his tent. Told me to run away and play. So I—ran away. And now—" She halted, slanting a mischievous pair of eyes towards him.

"Perhaps I may be permitted to play with you," he laughed.

"What shall we do?"

Young Anders' brain was quick to act. "I was bringing you this book," he said, "and after that I had thought of going to catch butterflies in the forest."

She knew he was an enthusiastic collector of those rare insects which are found in the African wilderness. She clapped her hands in child-like glee.

"Why, how delightful!" she cried. "I'll come, too. I'll begin a collection of my own this very day. I hope we find one of those wonderful ghost gray creatures with the purple shadows on his wings and the emerald eyes."

Little Huckleberry Becomes Important Shipping Product

For the past several months the Georgia press has carried articles commenting upon the wonders of Georgia farm products, peaches, apples, melons, tobacco and other commodities, which have been the source of much revenue to the growers. However, it is rare that anything is said about the Georgia huckleberry.

There are but few who realize what the extent of this crop is, or how much money it brings in at a time when there is little else on the market during the entire months of June and July.

While there have always been a few crates of huckleberries shipped from Georgia, the crop—which, incidentally, grows wild—received but scant notice until 1922, when J. S. Holland, route agent for the Southeastern Express company, undertook to impress upon the few shippers then interested the possibilities of developing the huckleberry into a money-making crop by enlarging the growth of their crop and doing business on a larger scale.

With proper direction and encouragement, there has been a very noticeable growth in the number of crates of huckleberries shipped from Georgia points, until this season, on the line of the Southern Railway company between Bremen, Ga., and Pell City, Fla., there were shipped over 12,000 crates of berries, having a market value of approximately $75,000.

These berries grow wild in the hilly sections of Georgia and Alabama and are gathered with little effort, some families making more by picking berries for two months than they do on their other crops combined.

During the season just passed there were 33 buyers and shippers located at the most convenient points to the pickers in the above sections, and the price paid for the berries ranged from 30 cents to $2 a gallon.

The success of the 1926 season has added new impetus to the movement, and should encourage the opening up of new markets, thus insuring continued profits and growth of this industry.

Atlantan Perfects Invention Of Primary Value to Driers

An Atlanta man, G. H. Butler, of 211-212 Glenn building, has patented a steam drier that due to its peculiar construction will save from 85 to 90 per cent of fuel used over the present methods of drying kilns now on the market.

This means that Mr. Butler's invention, for which he was awarded final papers last week, will revolutionize all former methods of drying fruit, poultry and other clay products; lumber and all wood products, and cloth of every description, especially in large bleacheries and laundries.

This invention consists of one or more units capable of furnishing whatever degree of heat units may be required for the particular plant in which it is being installed. It will throw off an even temperature to all parts of the drying room, thus assuring that every article—commodity in that room will dry through and through at the same time.

In addition to the great saving in fuel costs in Mr. Butler's invention are two other features that will appeal to everybody wanting much heat at little cost. The first is that the device is simple and fool-proof and will not blow up. A boy or common laborer can easily furnish all the heat required by a large plant. Any and all fuel may be used—coal, coke, wood, gas, natural gas, oil or automatic oil burners. The other feature is that notwithstanding all advantages that this steam drier has, it can be installed almost anywhere at moderate cost.

Mr. Butler, who has been in the general contracting business in Atlanta for many years, while waiting for all of his claims to be allowed by the patent office, has installed one of his steam driers in a large brick plant near Atlanta, where he is now saving the brick plant owners "better than 85 per cent on their coal bill in burning brick."

Mr. Butler was at one time connected with The Atlanta Constitution. He is a great believer in the future of Atlanta and the south and is especially interested in getting in touch with fruit and berry growers who wish to dry and save their surplus stocks of all kinds of perishable foods.

It will be readily seen that if the large apple, peach, berry, sweet potato, beet and other food growers, as private individuals, companies, corporations, communities or boards of trade or chambers of commerce will look carefully into the merits of this low-cost, easily-operated steam drier, they will see that they can save thousands of dollars' worth of various products that now are going to waste for lack of opportunity to send it to the consumers in a form that they may buy at any time of the year.

An old farmer was driving a mare that interfered very badly. A passing friend, observing the mare's antics, cried out:
"Say, Si, that mare of yours interferes pretty bad, don't she?"
Si paused, spat voluminously, and cried out:
"Yeh, she interferes, all right; but she boy interferes with nobody but herself!" — From Everybody's Magazine for September.

Autos Will Last Longer With Cylinders Ground

The American people have much to learn about their own cars says J. A. Camp president of the Camp Cylinder Grinding company, and while many know just what to do when their car is not running right, there are thousands who neglect the little things when they first notice them, and very often pay high for their experience sacrificing their car at a great loss later on.

The engine of an automobile is like any other complex piece of machinery, only it is called on to perform its full duty under all circumstances, and at times it is subject to great strain, and it is more misused by unskilled operators than any other high-priced piece of machinery.

First year drivers make many mistakes in driving their new cars, and others neglect to look over their cars carefully once in a while and then wonder that their car does not run as well as usual, probably at the time they need it the most.

Construction of Model Home Is Begun on Haynes Manor

America's "Model Home" is being erected on Peachtree Battle avenue in Haynes Manor. This home will be a model in every respect, and the materials used by Better Homes, Inc., in the construction of their homes are being featured in this particular building. Every thought has been given to quality and convenience.

The house contains 17 rooms, including five baths equipped with "standard plumbing" throughout, and features what the modern home should have in plumbing. Each bath is equipped with a shower. The foundation and walls of the building are of concrete stone tile manufactured by Keeling-Cassidy Brick company. The exterior will be of Bischoffsperre stucco and sunfast finish manufactured by the Bischoffsperre Manufacturing company. The decorations and furnishings will be by the J. M. High company, who furnish practically all the homes erected by Better Homes, Inc.

Moving pictures are being made showing the construction from day to day, and will be exhibited on the screens of Atlanta theaters after completion.

Upon completion this home will be open for a period of twelve months. The public is cordially invited to inspect it at their leisure. Many features of interest are promised.

All windows in this home are steel sash manufactured by the Detroit Steel Products company. The aluminum rollers are used with this sash. Both of these articles also are sold through the Applewhite & Lawler company. The lumber and millwork is manufactured by the W. B. Disbro Lumber company. The heating equipment is the well-known Pierce, Butler & Pierce vapor system, with Warren-Webster specialties, sold through the Walker Supply company, and is being installed by the M. W. Wise Heating company.

This home also will be equipped with a Klean-Hest oil-burning apparatus. The screen doors and weather stripping will be installed by Floyd Brothers company. Rustic driveways and walks will be laid by the Driveway Company of Atlanta. Three cars
